

AT 17 SHE HAS THE WISDOM OF AGE AND IS THE QUEEREST CHILD IN ALL THE WORLD

Grace Wright.

Seattle, Wash., May 6.—In theory Grace Wright is a "child." She is too young to be trusted at large without parent or guardian. She is unsophisticated, inexperienced and innocent of the ways of a wicked world—in theory.

Yet, in fact, she is as old as the hills with the wisdom of the ages.

Grace is a prisoner at the juvenile detention home. She is 17.

She is the most remarkable juvenile that ever came to the home.

She was stopped recently as she was about to board the boat for Vancouver by a customs officer, whom she describes as "long, lean and hungry-looking."

The attention of the officer was attracted to the "child" because she was obviously very young in years, expensively gowned and wore a diamond ring worth $1,800.

The "long, lean and hungry-looking" customs man asked her if she had $50 with her in cash. She hadn't.
